The International Vascular Access Symposium (i-VAS 2019) will be held in Paris, Friday - September 13th , 2019. Focusing in the most recent developments in the expanding field of Vascular Access.

Last year in our inaugural meeting, a multidisciplinary forum for Vascular Surgeons, Nephrologists, Dialysis Nurses, Technical Specialists, and other, gathered more than 200 health care professionals striving for excellence in this ever growing and complex health care specialty.

Innovations, Workshops, Live cases, Updates on new and established techniques in addition to debates on challenging and unresolved questions will be presented by some of the most experienced dialysis access specialists from Europe and the United States.

The goal for i-VAS will always be to provide an engaging discussion of how to provide the best dialysis access for our patients. We recognise the contribution to medical progress from scientific collaboration between industry and physicians, planning an open and non-biased forum while providing an opportunity for interaction and evaluation of new technology.

The International Vascular Access Symposium will be held at the Institut Mutualiste Montsouris, 42 boulevard Jourdan, the 14th arrondissement, Paris, FR. Additional information will be forthcoming for faculty, program, registration, and accommodations.

Paris is lovely in the fall so reserve this time on your calendar!

Please join us for a day of scientific exploration and debate encompassing the latest innovations and techniques, helping you and our patients establish a safe and functional vascular access.
