About

The Society for Vascular Surgery (SVS), in collaboration with the Vascular and Endovascular Surgery Society (VESS) and the Society for Clinical Vascular Surgery (SCVS), is launching an exciting new program meant to provide a meaningful leadership development experience for a select group of mid-career vascular surgeons.

This highly interactive and unique program will begin in 2020 and be implemented over a six-month period. The aim is to help our community of vascular surgeons reach their full potential as leaders and make the most positive impact possible in our specialty, their place of work, their community and other areas of importance in their life.

Program

The program will begin January-March with self-study and monthly online education. A two-day live leadership skills course will follow in April and the program will culminate at the 2020 Vascular Annual Meeting in June. The course will also consist of mentorship and a capstone project.

Content highlights include expert guest faculty sessions such as:
The business and economics of health care
Decisions in the C-Suite
The science and physics of leadership
Personality styles, leadership styles and emotional intelligence
Conflict and negotiation

A core faculty of vascular surgeons will develop and deliver customized content such as:

- Leading Self: Modeling the way, building credibility and trust in leadership
- Leading Others: Building and sustaining high-performance teams; encouraging the heart and optimizing motivation
- Leading Change: Inspiring shared vision, challenging the process, leading change
- Leading Results: Strategy development and execution
